job search is a classic example of being in the right place at the right time. You don't stand much of a chance if 100 resumes were submitted to a job opportunity before yours was submitted. While you might be the perfect person for the job, "getting there first" is (unfortunately) often more important than any other factor.

There are so many job search resources available to you. Some are crowded, some are empty, some are worth your time but using multiple resources is the best advice.

So, what can you do? Using company career sites in the most effective way is a four-step process:

Find the companies where you would like to work and visit their job sites

Find the jobs that match your profile BUT –do not apply yet

Use LinkedIn (don't tell me that you are not on LinkedIn), and find people in your network that are either working for the company or are linked to someone who is working for the company

Ask that individual to personally submit your resume for that position

Why? Your application has a much better chance of being reviewed and considered if it is submitted by someone who works for the company.
