How to dress for a job interview

Everybody wants to make a good first impression, especially when going out on job interviews. People often make assumptions about one another based on appearance alone. The person interviewing you for a job is no different and will come to some conclusions about you based on your attire before you've even answered one question. Dressing properly for a job interview shows that you respect the company for which you're interviewing and that you take good care of yourself.

There isn't one perfect outfit for every job interview, since every company is a bit different. Here are some tips for how to dress for the job you want and how to start shopping for that next big interview.

Job interview dress code

You don't need to go into a job interview without knowing the appropriate outfit. There are some things you can do in advance to know how to dress to make an impression. Look up the hiring company on social media. You may be able to find photos from office parties, meetings and other company gatherings that give you a good idea of how the current employees typically dress. If you can't gather this information from social media, you can also simply call the company's HR department and ask what the company dress code is.
